A week's delay might prove fatal, as Corbett appreciates that in that time he might go stale or train off an edge.

HOW CORBETT TRAINS. Carson, Nev., Feb. 22.-Corbett did some hard work today. First in order was a four minute thumping bout with It was money he owned and which I was Billy Woods. The champion laid on and Woods stood up against the blows as it he liked it. Toward the end Billy was art did not shut Vendig out of the afcide the matter. In an interview Corbett sald:

'In training for a fight I have a regularly laid out system, and each of my assistants has a special part and is seected for a particular purpose. When Jefferies arrives here I will have four men to work with. I take Woods first because he is a willing fellow and does not care how hard I punch him. My bout with him might be termed my slug-He never flinches, he never gets rattled, and is under instructions to punch me as hard and as often s he can. I therefore derive double benefit, for I accustom myself to hitting hard and to avoiding blows which I know will hurt me if they land. Then I take McVey and wrestle with him. He is ever so much heavier than I am, and he work of twisting him around and pushing him away is good for me, as it stands to reason that I need have no fear of being worsted in the clinches when I Vey. Jack understands that it is his place to rough me and to lean against me, so as to make me exert myself in freeing myself from him.

"I also put on the gloves with Mc-Vey. Now, he is not exactly a lightning striker, but he sends in a pile-driver blow. I ward them off with my forearm, and as a consequence I am seasoned from the wrist to the ellow. When I catch a blow on either arm it hurts the other fellow more than it hurts me.

"Bight here I want to tell you how it was I came to think of this seasoning process. When I fought Jackson I studied to avoid that heart punch of his.

"In my training I formulated a plan to hit Jackson's stomach whenever I felt sure that his right was coming. It worked well and served as an effectual stop forearm. Of course, it was better to have it there than under the heart, but it lamed my arm. Ever since that time

Baltimore, Feb. 22 .- President "Nick" Young of the National League of Baseball clubs has finished the preparations of the schedule of games to be played during the coming season and will submit it to the spring meeting which begins in this city on Thursday next. There appears to be but little doubt that the hedule as arranged by President Young will be adopted without material dissention and practically without change, as it has been prepared after a full correspondence with the various clubs and careful consideration of their wishes. President Young is very reticient concerning the schedule, but the following details concerning it have been learned
